Theme of the Seminar

Anthropology is a multidisciplinary field of science, which includes the study of all aspects of humankind--archaeological, biological, linguistic and socio-cultural. Anthropology has roots in the natural and social sciences and in the humanities, ranging in approach from basic to applied research. Ethics is concerned with the conduct of human beings. Ethics does not prescribe a specific set of rules or policies. Instead, it provides a framework for evaluating problems and determining an appropriate course of action. Ethical analysis should reflect both internationally accepted norms and locally relevant cultural values.

Anthropologists criticize some components of bioethics because of their abstract principles derived from arm-chair philosophy and lack of cross-cultural analysis (and ethnocentric view) for that they prepare a ready made ethical code of conduct which may differ significantly from culture to culture.

Therefore, the seminar aims to investigate such area of bioethics which may criticize in the light of anthropological fieldwork. The seminar will finds some area of bioethics to study cultural construct of morality including cross-cultural analysis keeping in mind cultural relativism in true sense.

The seminar can explore sub-themes like Bioethics and its Critics, Ethics and Fieldwork, Ethics and Culture, Ethics in Health studies and so on.
